Learning to Look

A great way to introduce your group to GRAM! Analyze the formal qualities of art to gain understanding of the art-making process. Identify and discuss elements and principles such as composition, color, line, texture, scale, proportion, balance, contrast, and rhythm. Through conversation in the galleries, your guests will unlock the choices artists make to tell their stories.

Picturing America

Connect paintings by Thomas Hart Benton, Richard Diebenkorn, and other artists in GRAM's permanent collection to U.S. and Michigan History. Consider themes such as the American landscape, social/political structures, and westward expansion.

Nature Revealed

Investigate the relationship between nature and the visual arts and acquire the observation skills needed to interpret and find meaning in art. Discover how works on view at the world's first LEED Gold Certified art museum, depict different responses to nature including awe, fear, control, wonder, domination, curiosity, and more. Through careful observation, discuss how artists have portrayed landscapes / the environment and what emotions or ideas they evoke.
